RE: Police Perspective: FIRST STEP Act (S. 2795) & Sentencing Reform

Dear President Trump:

I write to you today as Executive Director of Law Enforcement Leaders to Reduce Crime & Incarceration, a bipartisan group of more than 200 current and former law enforcement officials.

Today, our nation faces new criminal justice challenges, including a rise in opioid overdoses, an uptick in homicides in some cities, and strained police-community relations. While there is no one-size-fits-all solution, we as leaders in law enforcement feel compelled to share our views on how passing prison and sentencing reform together is vital to keeping our nation safe.

First, I wanted to share our briefing memo explaining how the FIRST STEP Act and sentencing reform will improve public safety. Americans trust us, as law enforcement officers, to both secure the safety of their communities and advise policymakers on how to advance that goal. We hope this information helps ease any concerns surrounding the bill. Our position is also in line with that of the Fraternal Order of Police, which recently endorsed bipartisan efforts toward justice reform.

Second, I wanted to share our previous letter supporting the FIRST STEP Act and sentencing reform sent to leaders in Congress, explaining the necessity of passing sentencing and prison reform together to reduce recidivism and increase fairness. Over 60 of our members signed onto this letter, writing everywhere from Virginia to New Orleans to Iowa, to share their views. I have expressed similar views in the The Hill, with Washington Police Chief Peter Newsham.

We are grateful for your unwavering leadership in prioritizing public safety and the critical issues facing law enforcement. I hope we can work together toward bipartisan reforms.

Respectfully yours,

RE: FIRST STEP Act (S. 2795) & Sentencing Reform and Corrections Act (S.1917)

Dear Leader McConnell and Senator Schumer:

I write today to express Law Enforcement Leaders' continued support for bipartisan federal criminal justice reform and urge Congress to swiftly pass the Sentencing Reform and Corrections Act of 2017 (S. 1917, "SRCA") and the FIRST STEP Act (S. 2795) together.

The SRCA contains key sentencing provisions that will fix unproductive mandatory minimum sentences that drain finite law enforcement, prosecutorial, and prison resources away from fighting violent crime. The FIRST STEP Act will improve prison conditions and reentry programs thereby increasing opportunities for men and women to successfully reenter society

Too often, ineffective and outdated federal mandatory minimum sentencing laws send offenders to prison for far too long. Many such prisoners are struggling with addiction or mental health issues, which prison does not address. As police and prosecutors are forced to spend their time on low-level, non-violent offenses, we miss the opportunity to go after the most dangerous threats to public safety — and taxpayers foot the bill for that unnecessary incarceration. To be serious about public safety, we must recalibrate how long offenders spend in prison and break the cycle of recidivism.

I have attached a letter from more than 60 members of Law Enforcement Leaders detailing law enforcement's support of federal sentencing and prison reform. Both are required to correct the inefficiencies in our justice system and better serve the public. That letter explained our concerns that the Prison Reform and Redemption Act (H.R. 3356) and the CORRECTIONS Act (S. 1994) were both insufficient, as they lacked any sentencing reform component. That same concern applies to the FIRST STEP Act.

I urge Congress to take this opportunity to pass substantive changes that strengthen our criminal justice system. Thank you for your leadership on the important criminal justice issues facing the country today.

Respectfully yours,

RE: Law Enforcement Perspective -- Sentencing Reform and Corrections Act (S.1917), Prison Reform and Redemption Act (H.R. 3356), CORRECTIONS Act (S. 1994)

Dear Speaker, Chairmen, and Leaders:

We write to you as members of Law Enforcement Leaders to Reduce Crime & Incarceration. As current and former law enforcement officials, our primary responsibility is, first and foremost, to protect the public safety of our country. We have dedicated our careers to fighting crime and keeping our communities safe. That same duty compels us to speak out today about the critical nature of sentencing reform as part of any criminal justice reform effort in Congress.

Law Enforcement Leaders unites more than 200 current and former police chiefs, sheriffs, district attorneys, U.S. Attorneys, and attorneys general from all 50 states and across the political spectrum. Our mission is to work to reduce crime and incarceration together. To achieve this goal, we focus on four policy priorities — two of which call for reforming mandatory minimum sentencing laws and improving efforts to assist prisoners reenter society.

Legislation like the Prison Reform and Redemption Act (H.R.3356) and the CORRECTIONS Act (S. 1994) are useful efforts to improve the lives of those in prison. But such efforts should be coupled with efforts to reduce unnecessary incarceration, as it is in the Sentencing Reform and Corrections Act.

Today, our oversized prison population costs taxpayers $80 billion annually and draws resources away from law enforcement efforts to fight violent crime.<sup>i</sup> To refocus our resources and enhance public safety, we urge Congress to pass legislation including both comprehensive sentencing reform and reentry programs to reduce recidivism rates.

Lawmakers and Presidents of both parties have taken great strides to reform prison systems and develop more effective reentry programs. We are grateful to the White House for allocating resources towards reducing recidivism, through the creation of the Federal Interagency Council on Crime Prevention and Improving Reentry, and for its support of similar legislative efforts. This concerted effort acknowledges the importance of setting an example of criminal justice reform on the federal level, and the impact federal policies have on state and local criminal justice practice.

However, improving prison conditions and reentry services, on their own, will not adequately solve our high rates of incarceration and recidivism. It will not stop the overuse of incarceration for minor drug-related and low-level, non-violent offenses. To have meaningful reform, we must also address our sentencing laws. As those fighting crime on the frontlines, we know from firsthand experience that it is ineffective to exhaust resources on reducing the rate of recidivism if there is no accompanying effort to reduce the rate at which people unnecessarily enter prison in the first place. For this reason, 67 of our members wrote in support of a previous version of the Sentencing Reform and Corrections Act in early 2016.<sup>ii</sup>

We ask the Senate, House, and White House to work together to pass the Sentencing Reform and Corrections Act in addition to any reentry legislation. The Act would shorten unnecessarily long sentences for lower-level offenders, a solution that has been shown in other parts of the country to successfully reduce crime and incarceration together.<sup>iii</sup>

States have already had much success in such efforts. Following the elimination of prison sentences for certain low-level and non-violent felonies in 2009, Florida's imprisonment rate fell by 10.4 percent in five years, and its violent and property crime rate by 20 percent.<sup>iv</sup> Similarly, South Carolina eliminated mandatory minimums for drug possession in 2010. By 2014, the state's imprisonment rate fell by 13 percent and the violent crime rate dropped 17 percent.<sup>v</sup> By 2013, the state's three-year recidivism rate also decreased by 13 percent.<sup>vi</sup> California also enacted a number of policies that significantly reduced the state's incarceration rate, including Proposition 47, which reclassified petty theft and simple, low-level drug possession as misdemeanors.<sup>vii</sup> With the savings from reduced incarceration, the state invested it into community-based crime prevention programs.<sup>viii</sup> These are promising results, which can be replicated at the federal level. If Congress offers national leadership on sentencing reform, other states will also follow suit.

As law enforcement leaders, we want to make clear where we stand: Not only is passing federal mandatory minimum and reentry reform necessary to reduce incarceration, it is also necessary to help police and prosecutors continue to keep crime at its historic lows across the country. We believe the Sentencing Reform and Corrections Act will accomplish this goal and respectfully urge Congress to swiftly pass it.

Respectfully yours,
